

Murray Wright

Murray is an accomplished coach and facilitator using contemporary approaches to support executives and their teams - both intact and virtual - with a focus on building the individual and collective capability to sustain performance through constant change and deliver the results that matter.

Murray worked in Europe, The Middle-East, South-East Asia and Australia in leadership roles in international and national hotels with experience in tertiary education and consulting. He has been consulting, coaching and facilitating for over 12 years working with in a variety of industries in Australia and the Asia Pacific region.

Coaching philosophy and approach

Murray brings presence, commitment to building relationships, a focus on outcomes and a bit of fun to his work. He adopts a systemic approach to bring new perspective and deeper insight as a starting point to meaningful work with individuals and teams. It is dynamic and underpinned by contemporary approaches including systems work, narrative coaching, solution focus and mindfulness. It is very much about working on real issues and using the mind and body to learn in the moment.

Industry knowledge and experience

Murray works one-on-one with senior leaders, emerging leaders and senior and executive teams, supporting them to build better relationships, grow influence, and develop the skills and practices to be able to adapt quickly and deliver results. He works across various sectors including hospitality, real estate, telecommunications, recruitment, FMCG, retail, finance, tertiary education, insurance, property services, utilities, construction, environmental manufacturing, government and not-for-profit.
